MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

PROFESSIONAL STANDARD: Blood Borne Viruses

Endorsed by the Medical Board of South Australia on 19 July 2007

Approved by the Minister for Health on 27 October 2007

Commencement Date:	November 2007	Review Date:	November 2009
---------------------------	---------------	---------------------	---------------

PROFESSIONAL STANDARD STATEMENT

Context:	Medical practitioners have a wide range of responsibilities towards their patients, colleagues and the general public. Blood borne viruses such as Hepatitis B, Hepatitis C and HIV create particular responsibilities for doctors in preventing transmission of these infections.
Objectives:	This professional standard governs the conduct of medical practitioners to prevent the transmission of blood borne viruses to patients or colleagues. This professional standard should be read in conjunction with the Board's Code of Professional Conduct: Good Medical Practice. A failure to comply with this professional standard is prima facie evidence that a medical practitioner has engaged in unprofessional conduct and may result in the Registrar instituting disciplinary action against the medical practitioner.
Definitions and Acronyms:	Registrants include both medical practitioners and medical students. Exposure prone procedures are those procedures where there is potential for contact between the skin (usually the finger or thumb) of the health care worker and: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • sharp surgical instruments • needles, or • sharp tissues (splinters/pieces of bone/tooth) in body cavities or in poorly visualised or confined body sites including the mouth. Procedures which lack these characteristics are unlikely to pose a risk of transmission of blood borne viruses from infected health care workers to patients.
Professional Standard Provisions:	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Registrants must follow standard infection control precautions whenever patients are examined and treated. 2. Any registrant who undertakes exposure prone procedures has a professional responsibility to know his or her infective status in relation to blood borne viruses.

3. In South Australia, registrants have a positive obligation to report in writing to the Board if they become aware that they may be medically unfit to provide medical treatment. This includes circumstances where the registrant has become aware of a blood borne infection which may place them in this category.
4. A registrant who is aware that they are infected with a blood borne virus must not undertake exposure prone procedures. Doing so would prima facie, constitute unprofessional conduct and may cause the registrant to be subject to disciplinary proceedings and criminal proceedings.
5. There is an obligation to notify the Board in writing if a registrant is of the opinion that another registrant is medically unfit to practise or train safely. This includes notification about a registrant whose blood borne condition may cause them to be a risk to their patients or colleagues. There is also a professional and ethical obligation to counsel the registrant to seek help.
6. Reporting an infected registrant to the Board is mandatory in South Australia under certain prescribed circumstances if you are one of the following:
 - a. a health professional who has treated, or is treating, a patient who is a medical practitioner or student; or
 - b. a medical service provider providing service through the instrumentality of a medical practitioner or student; or
 - c. a hospital with an arrangement with a medical practitioner under which the practitioner provides medical treatment at the hospital; or
 - d. a person in charge of a medical institution at which a medical student is undertaking qualifications for registration as a medical practitioner.
7. Legal obligations are described in the Medical Practice Act 2004 – obtainable from the Board website.
8. Infected medical practitioners may continue to practise medicine, provided that public safety is not endangered by their impaired health or their clinical practice.
9. All registrants are strongly recommended to consider self-vaccination against HBV.
10. Registrants must ensure they are familiar with and comply with current Department of Health circulars dealing with infected health care workers.
11. Medical Practitioners should be familiar and comply with the current Department of Health and Aging publications and Department of Health circulars in relation to infection.

MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

PROFESSIONAL STANDARD: Intimate Examinations

Endorsed by the Medical Board of South Australia on 19 July 2007

Approved by the Minister for Health on 27 October 2007

Commencement Date:	November 2007	Review Date:	November 2009

PROFESSIONAL STANDARD STATEMENT

Context:	The Board regularly receives complaints from patients who feel that medical practitioners have behaved inappropriately during an intimate examination. The Board views complaints about professional boundary violation very seriously due to the potential for harm arising from such events. This professional standard is intended to minimise the stress and embarrassment experienced by patients during the conduct of an intimate examination. Compliance with this standard may also be used as a defence against an allegation that a medical practitioner has acted inappropriately during an intimate examination.
Objectives:	This professional standard governs the conduct of medical practitioners when performing intimate examinations. This professional standard should be read in conjunction with the Board's Code of Professional Conduct: Good Medical Practice. A failure to comply with this professional standard is prima facie evidence that a medical practitioner has engaged in unprofessional conduct and may result in the Registrar instituting disciplinary action against the medical practitioner.
Definitions and Acronyms:	Intimate examinations are defined as any examination of the breasts, genitalia or rectum of a patient.
Professional Standard Provisions:	When conducting an intimate examinations medical practitioners should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Comply with standard 2.3 of the Code of Professional Conduct: Good Medical Practice by respecting the right of patients to be fully involved in decisions about their care and by respecting the privacy and dignity of patients;

- Explain to the patient why an examination is necessary and give the patient an opportunity to ask questions.
- Explain what the examination will involve, in a way the patient can understand, so that the patient has a clear idea of what to expect, including any potential pain or discomfort.
- Obtain the patient's permission before the examination and be prepared to discontinue the examination if the patient asks you to. Make a record that permission has been obtained.
- Offer a chaperone or invite the patient (in advance if possible) to have a relative or friend present. If the patient does not want a chaperone, record that the offer was made and declined. If a chaperone is present, record that fact and make a note of the chaperone's identity. If for justifiable practical reasons you cannot offer a chaperone, explain that to the patient and, if possible, offer to delay the examination to a later date or make arrangements for the examination to be performed at a health service that offers chaperones for intimate examinations. Record the discussion and its outcome.
- Keep any discussion relevant and avoid unnecessary personal comments.
- Give the patient privacy to undress and dress and use drapes to maintain the patient's dignity. Do not assist the patient in removing clothing unless you have clarified with them that your assistance is required.
- Wear gloves when conducting the examination of the genitalia or rectum.

Children

Medical practitioners must obtain the consent of a parent or guardian or in the absence of parental consent, if the child is considered to be capable of understanding the nature, consequences and risks of the treatment and the treatment is in their best interests, a written opinion must be obtained from another medical practitioner who has examined the child before the examination has commenced.

Anaesthetised patients

Medical practitioners must obtain consent in writing prior to administering an anaesthetic, for the intimate examination of anaesthetised patients. If supervising students, the medical practitioner should ensure that valid written consent has been obtained before any students perform intimate examination on patients under anaesthesia.

MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

PROFESSIONAL STANDARD: Medical Practitioners Treating Family

Endorsed by the Medical Board of South Australia on 19 July 2007

Approved by the Minister for Health on 27 October 2007

Commencement Date:	November 2007	Review Date:	November 2009
---------------------------	---------------	---------------------	---------------

Context:

Optimal medical care is provided by competent, compassionate practitioners who are able to assess and treat their patients within a mutually respectful patient-doctor relationship. The Board strongly recommends that family members of medical practitioners have their own independent general practitioners to meet their health care needs.

Wherever possible, medical practitioners should avoid treating family members because in these circumstances:

- the patient may feel uncomfortable disclosing sensitive information or undergoing a physical examination when the medical practitioner is a family member;
- medical practitioners may fail to explore sensitive areas when taking a medical history or may fail to perform appropriate physical examinations when treating family members;
- communication may be compromised by factors relating to family dynamics and established patterns of communication;
- patients may feel limited in their decisions or obliged to follow advice if it comes from a medical practitioner who is a family member;
- medical practitioners are unlikely to perform at their best if closely related to the patient, especially in emergency situations;
- professional objectivity may be compromised and the medical practitioner's judgment may be influenced by the nature of their relationship with the patient;
- the principles of informed consent may not be adhered to when a medical practitioner treats a family member;

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • confidentiality may be difficult to maintain when medical care takes place within the family; • record keeping may be compromised with no systematic record of the consultation and any subsequent investigations or treatment; and • effective communication with the patient's usual medical practitioner or other medical carers may be compromised. The Board understands that medical practitioners occupy a unique role as family and friends of patients and that there may be pressure to provide medical care to family members. In these situations, the appropriate role for medical practitioners should include care, support and advocacy, but not that of primary medical provider.
Objectives:	This professional standard ensures that medical practitioners maintain professional detachment and objectivity in relation to the health of family members. This professional standard should be read in conjunction with the Board's Code of Professional Conduct - Good Medical Practice.
Definitions and Acronyms:	Family Members may be defined as: Those closest to the medical practitioner in knowledge, care and affection. This includes the biological family, the family of acquisition (by marriage or contract) and the family of choice (not related by genetics or by marriage/contract). (Source: Adapted from Canadian Palliative Care Association)
Professional Standard Provisions:	The Board endorses the following general provisions: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Medical practitioners should not initiate treatment (including prescribing) for family members and it is inappropriate to regularly maintain ongoing prescription medication 2. Medical practitioners should not serve as primary or regular care providers for family members, although there are circumstances in which they may work together with an independent medical practitioner to maintain established treatment. 3. Medical practitioners should not issue certificates for family members. 4. Medical practitioners should not issue referrals for family members. 5. In emergency situations where there is no help available, medical practitioners may treat family members until another medical practitioner becomes available. 6. In isolated settings, there may be no alternative source of medical care. In these situations, medical practitioners should advise the Board of the circumstances and, where possible, seek external review of the patient and their treatment.

MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

GUIDELINES FOR MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS AND MEDICAL STUDENTS INFECTED WITH A BLOOD-BORNE VIRUS

Introduction

A health care worker with a blood-borne virus (HIV, Hepatitis B, Hepatitis C) may need to modify their clinical practice or desired career path. There are many areas of medicine in which having a blood-borne virus is not significant to practice and many others in which the impact of the virus on clinical practice can be managed. These guidelines have been prepared to assist a medical practitioner or medical student who has been diagnosed with a blood-borne virus to access care and advice and to undertake the notification and review required by the Medical Board of SA.

Background

The Medical Board of SA is responsible for protecting the public by regulating the practice of medicine in South Australia. The Board has a Health Committee which reviews all doctors and students with a physical or mental illness which may impair their ability to perform their medical duties or complete their medical studies. Doctors and students who are, or who become, positive for any of the blood-borne viruses are required to notify the Medical Board of their status so that the Board may determine the need for any limitation on their scope of practice. In order to properly understand the risks involved in certain modes of clinical practice the advice of an expert in the field of blood-borne viruses is required. The Health Committee uses the current evidence about infectious risk from the Department of Health and Ageing (DoHA) together with the advice of the treating specialist when considering limits on a doctor's/student's scope of practice as required by the Medical Practice Act 2004.

What do you need to do?

Once a diagnosis of a blood-borne virus has been confirmed (Hepatitis B surface antigen [HBsAg] positive, Hepatitis C virus [HCV] antibody positive or Human Immunodeficiency virus [HIV] positive) you need to:

- 1 make an appointment to see an expert in the field of blood-borne viruses (a specialist treating these infections such as an Infectious Diseases Physician, Sexual Health Physician or Hepatologist) - recommendations could be made by the Medical Board if that would help you.
- 2 make an appointment to meet with the Registrar of the Medical Board as soon as possible by ringing 8219 9815. You will be asked to sign undertakings which will limit your registration until the specialist's report is available to the Board.
- 3 Ensure your practice is consistent with the DoHA guidelines referred to above and the advice in Appendix 1 to this document until such time as further advice is provided.

What happens next?

In order to assess the risk for occupational viral transmission, on which any restriction of practice will be based, further serological testing will be necessary as follows:

- HBsAg, HCV antibody, HIV antibody, complete blood examination, biochemistry and liver function tests, coagulation profile plus.
- If HBsAg positive: HBeAg, HBeAb, HBV-DNA (quantitative PCR) and HDV antibody. HBV DNA sequencing for precore and precore promoter mutations should be available in selected individuals who are HBeAg negative.
- If HCV antibody positive: qualitative HCV RNA (by PCR) and HCV viral load.
- If HIV antibody positive: HIV RNA (viral load) and CD4 cell estimation.

Alterations to clinical practice

Alterations to clinical practice may be required for doctors/students infected with wild type HBV who are HBeAg positive or infected with precore promoter or precore mutant HBV who have a HBV viral load greater than 2,000 IU/ml.

The clinical practices that may require modification are those specified as High Risk Exposure Prone procedures: 'any sub-mucosal invasion with sharp, hand held instruments, or procedure dealing with sharp tissue/bone spicules, usually in a poorly visualized or confined space (eg orthopaedic surgery, trauma, internal cavity surgery)'.

Techniques that have been shown to increase the risk of blood-borne infection include:

- Digital palpation of a needle tip in a body cavity; and
- Simultaneous presence of the HCW's fingers and a needle or other sharp instrument (eg bone spicule) in poorly visualized or highly confined anatomic sites. HCWs should not assist at or perform abdominal, pelvic or cardiothoracic surgery, open orthopaedic surgery or oral examinations by a gloved finger with the potential for exposure to bone spicules.

A list of techniques to reduce the risk of exposure prone procedures and a list of procedures which may be undertaken are appended (Appendix 1).

Health Committee action

The Health Committee of the Medical Board will review the specialist report along with any other relevant information and determine whether the doctor's/medical student's practice requires limitations and, if so, to what degree. The Committee will specify the limitation and the practitioner's/student's registration will be limited accordingly. Under some circumstances practice in risk areas may be allowed to continue after thorough evaluation and with informed consent from each patient.

Specialist and Medical Board monitoring

The specialist will monitor clinical and laboratory progress of the doctor/student at regular intervals and provide reports to the Health Committee of the Medical Board. The Board will monitor for any breach of limitations or notifications which identify a public safety risk.

Termination of restrictions

Limitation of your registration may become unnecessary if:

- In the case of HBV infection, the viral DNA remains persistently below 2,000 IU/ml, due to therapy or not, and the viral load is monitored - every 6 months if not on treatment or every 3 months with treatment. Please note that this level of viral load is currently under review nationally and may be changed in the future.
- A doctor/student with Hepatitis C has clearance of HCV RNA spontaneously or with treatment and remains HCV RNA undetectable by qualitative PCR assay. If the PCR becomes negative on treatment this needs to be confirmed monthly during treatment and until a sustained viral response is established. Establishment of a sustained viral response will be determined by the treating Physician.

Confirmation of spontaneous clearance of HCV requires 2 negative viral tests 6 months apart.

Limitation of registration may become necessary again if HCV infection relapses with HCV RNA positivity.

Appendix

Reducing the risk

Standard precautions should be used at all times.

A number of physical measures can reduce the risk of bi-directional blood and body fluid contact including:

- Routine wearing of gloves, or double-gloving, and eye protection when there is the possibility of contact.
- Use of blunt rather than sharp drawing up needles.
- Injecting into bungs with blunt rather than sharp devices.
- Immediate disposal of sharp needles and objects after use.
- Never recapping needles.
- Use of PVC rather than glass ampoules.
- Widespread availability and use of sharps disposal containers.
- Provision of suitable work surfaces, including needle-free zones, during procedures performed at the bed-side or in the operating room.
- Use of blunt rather than sharp suturing needles.
- Use of instruments (rather than fingers) to grab needles when suturing.

Unrestricted procedures

The following procedures are not considered high-risk exposure prone procedures, provided the HCW complies with Standard Precautions, including re-gloving and using completely new, sterile equipment if contamination occurs:

- External examination (gloves not required).
- Oral, vaginal and rectal examinations that do not involve sharp instruments.
- External examination of facial trauma without fractured bones or glass fragments.
- Venepuncture, phlebotomy, insertion of IV access including central venous lines.
- Administering IV, IM, ID or SC injections.
- Needle biopsy, needle aspiration, insertion of underwater seal drain, lumbar puncture, venous cutdown, angiographic procedures.
- Excision of epidermal or dermal lesions.
- Suturing of superficial skin lacerations.
- Endoscopy, colonoscopy, bronchoscopy and cystoscopy.
- Placement of nasogastric tubes, rectal tubes and urinary catheters.
- Acupuncture.
- Procedures where the use of sharps is superficial, well visualized and administered to compliant or anaesthetized patients where it is very unlikely that a HCW skin injury would result in exposure of the patient to the HCW's blood or body substances.
- Any other procedures that do not involve sharps.

Good Samaritan assistance

Doctors and medical students with blood-borne viruses may render assistance in an emergency in order to preserve life, irrespective of their limitations in ordinary practice, and are advised to take whatever precautions are available at the scene.

MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

GUIDELINE: Medical Records – A Guide for Patients

Commencement Date:	November 2007	Review Date:	November 2008
---------------------------	---------------	---------------------	---------------

The Board has developed this guide for patients in response to public enquiries about medical records. It provides information to patients about the records used by medical practitioners to support good medical care.

Medical records contain the information collected by medical practitioners which relates to the patient's health and wellbeing. These records may be paper based or electronic and can include x-rays, results of tests, specialist reports and other information. Patients usually have the most accurate and up to date information about their health. For this reason, it is information told to doctors by patients that forms the main part of the medical record.

What information should be in medical records?

Medical records should contain all important medical history, such as major illnesses, allergies, medications and family information. The medical practitioner should record details of each consultation, including findings of any examinations, medications prescribed, procedures carried out, tests ordered and their results. The records also include letters and reports from specialists.

How confidential are medical records?

Medical records should remain confidential between the patient and the medical practitioner. If patients see more than one medical practitioner at a practice, all of the medical practitioners in the practice may see the medical records in order to provide care. Records are also accessed by staff at the practice in order to file, maintain or retrieve documents that form part of the record. Staff at medical practices are trained in managing records in a confidential manner. Medical records may be accessed in a court or for other legal reasons. Medical practitioners are required to report to government departments in some situations, for example, for some infectious diseases, and in relation to fitness to drive, injuries from firearms, and suspected child abuse.

Who owns the medical records?

Medical records are the property of the medical practitioner or practice that the patient attends. However patients have the right to access the information contained in the records under Commonwealth Privacy legislation.

They concern my health – why don't I own them?

The records are the notes that a medical practitioner makes when patients visit in order to provide optimal health care. They remain the property of the medical practitioner even though the notes contain confidential information about the patient. When you visit the medical practitioner for health care, it is taken for granted that you give your permission for the medical practitioner to take notes for the purposes of your health care.

Does this mean I have to stay with one medical practitioner forever?

Patients have the right to attend the medical practitioner of their choice and are free to leave one practice and attend another if they wish.

Can I have copies of investigation reports and other tests?

Most medical practitioners will provide copies of these reports if asked. It is up to the medical practitioner how information from the record is provided. Patients may be asked to pay for the costs of copying any content from the records. It is always the patient's right to know the results of any tests. Often patients are provided with x-rays or other radiological tests. In this instance it is important to take relevant records to subsequent appointments.

Can I transfer my medical records to a new medical practitioner?

There is a professional obligation for a medical practitioner to provide the new treating medical practitioner with all of the information that they need to take over a patient's care. This is usually done in a letter, rather than sending the actual records to the new medical practitioner.

How do I arrange this?

Ask the new medical practitioner to arrange for the transfer of records from the previous treating medical practitioner. The new medical practitioner will ask for any information they need to help them care for you. Normally, you will be asked to sign a consent form to allow the transfer of records.

Can the doctor charge for the handing over of medical records?

Some medical practitioners may charge a fee for handling and copying their records to cover the administrative costs involved. The previous medical practitioner may charge a fee for providing a summary, especially if your history is long and/or complex.

What happens when a practice changes hands?

When a practice changes hands, the medical practitioner leaving the practice should make reasonable efforts to ensure that important medical information is passed on properly.

In the case of the death of a medical practitioner, the estate of the medical practitioner becomes the owner of the records. Sometimes there can be confusion and delays after a death, and the records may not be managed efficiently. We advise you to ask the estate to send records to your new medical practitioner.

How long is a medical practitioner required to keep my records?

Records must be kept for at least seven (7) years for adults from the date that the patient last received medical care from the medical practitioner or medical practice. Records must be kept until at least the age of 25 years for children. Some medical practitioners keep records indefinitely; other clear out old records regularly.

MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

PROFESSIONAL GUIDELINE: MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS TREATING SELF

Endorsed by the Medical Board of South Australia on 16 April 2009

Commencement Date: May 2009

Review Date: May 2011

PROFESSIONAL GUIDELINE STATEMENT

Context:	The Board recognises that medical practitioners in good physical and psychological health provide better medical care for patients. In order to maximise the quality of patient care, career longevity and enjoyment, and healthy family/personal relationships, a medical practitioner should ensure that his/her own health needs are suitably addressed. Evidence indicates there is a connection between reduced health and well-being of medical practitioners and poorer quality patient care. On the other hand, medical practitioners with good health manage stress more successfully and are less likely to suffer depressive illness or addiction disorders. Currently the minority of medical practitioners have their own medical practitioner. Challenges include a culture of self diagnosis within the profession, an unwillingness to take on the role of patient and concerns about confidentiality when receiving medical treatment from fellow practitioners. The Board advocates that objective third party diagnosis and treatment will benefit both medical practitioners and patients alike in achieving optimal outcomes. In emergency situations, self diagnosis and treatment are unavoidable; however this should be regarded as the exception rather than the rule. Self treatment should be reported to another medical practitioner for ongoing consultation as soon as possible.
Objectives:	This professional guideline governs the conduct of medical practitioners for self treatment. The guideline should be read in conjunction with the Board's Code of Professional Conduct: Good Medical Practice. The Board is committed to supporting medical practitioners in making responsible decisions about their own health and wellbeing. The Doctors' Health Committee, a subcommittee of the Board, supports any medical practitioners requiring assistance.
Definitions and Acronyms:	Treating self is defined as any diagnosis made by a medical practitioner about his/her health together with and any resultant issuing of prescriptions or referrals in relation to his/her own medical condition/s.

Professional Guideline Provisions:	The Board endorses the following general provisions: <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Medical practitioner-patients are entitled to the same high levels of care and respect as all other patients.2. Medical practitioners are strongly advised to establish a professional relationship with an independent medical practitioner outside the family who takes overall responsibility for their health care.3. Medical practitioners have a responsibility to ensure that his/her health does not affect patient care. As self treatment may impact care, independent and objective medical review and management is recommended. Medical practitioners who think they may have been exposed to a notifiable disease must seek and follow advice from a suitably qualified medical practitioner and, if found to be infected, have regular medical supervision. Under the Medical Practice Act, any medical practitioner whose own health may impact patient care is to notify the Board of his/her condition; Please refer to relevant Professional Standard Provisions outlined in the Board Standard on Blood Borne Viruses.4. Medical practitioners are strongly discouraged from diagnosing or treating themselves, except for minor conditions or in emergency situations, and then only if another medical practitioner is not readily available. If self treatment does occur it should be reported to an independent medical practitioner for ongoing objective consultation and guidance.5. Except in emergencies, or for ongoing prescriptions for previously diagnosed (by an independent medical practitioner) chronic conditions, it is not appropriate for medical practitioners to write prescriptions or referrals for themselves.6. It is strictly inappropriate for medical practitioners to issue sickness certificates for themselves and the Board does not support this practice.7. Medical practitioners who do prescribe for themselves for an improper purpose may be guilty of unprofessional conduct.
