1. Introduction

The 'Working with Children Check Guidelines' (the Guidelines) are made pursuant to section 4 of the Child Safety (Prohibited Persons) Act 2016 (the Act).

A working with children check in respect of a person consists of the central assessment unit assessing assessable information in relation to a person against the prescribed risk assessment criteria to determine whether or not the person poses an unacceptable risk to children.

On completing a working with children check, the central assessment unit must determine whether the person is, or is not, to be prohibited from working with children. Persons who pose an unacceptable risk to children are to be prohibited from working with them.

The Department for Human Services Screening Unit performs the functions and exercises the powers of the central assessment unit for the purposes of the Act.

The Guidelines are to be read as a whole and in conjunction with the Act and the Child Safety (Prohibited Persons) Regulations 2019 (the Regulations).

They provide the framework for how the central assessment unit will conduct a working with children check for the purposes of the Act; i.e. how the central assessment unit will identify and assess assessable information against the risk assessment criteria to determine whether the person is, or is not, to be prohibited from working with children.

The Guidelines are intended to be subject to continuous improvement and will be reviewed periodically to determine whether they are meeting the requirements of the Act and Regulations.

2. Objects and principles

In performing its functions under the Act, the central assessment unit must have regard to, and seek to give effect to, the objects and principles of the Act.

The Act's primary objective is to minimise the risk to children posed by persons who work with them. It is a further object of the Act to provide a framework for the prohibition of persons who pose an unacceptable risk to children from working with them.

The paramount consideration in respect of the administration, operation and enforcement of the Act must be the best interests of children, having regard to their safety and protection.

Working with Children Check Guidelines – July 2019

A working with children check is not a determination of a person's suitability to work with children. A working with children check that does not result in a person being prohibited from working with children is not proof of good character or that the person does not pose a risk to children. It is an assessment of one person's prior conduct, it is a point in time assessment of past behaviour in order to predict future risk.

The fact that a working with children check is conducted in relation to an employee does not satisfy an employer's obligation to ensure that a workplace is safe for children. It is one part of a range of strategies to be employed by employers and the community to keep children safe.

Employers and caregivers cannot rely on working with children check to absolve them of responsibility for safeguarding children. Organisations and employers must have in place comprehensive strategies to ensure child safe environments.

3. Automatic prohibition from working with children – prescribed offences

The following persons are automatically prohibited from working with children:

- a person who has been found guilty, as defined in section 5(2) of the Act, of a prescribed offence committed as an adult pursuant to section 15(1)(c) of the Act; or
- a person who, under a law of the Commonwealth, or of another State or Territory, is prohibited from working with children (however described) pursuant to section 15(1)(b) of the Act.

The prohibition from working with children operates pursuant to a statutory prohibition under section 15(1) of the Act. It is not based on an assessment undertaken by the central assessment unit as to whether or not the person poses an unacceptable risk to children or a determination of the central assessment unit pursuant to section 28(5) of the Act, as to whether or not the person should be prohibited from working with them.

The prohibition applies irrespective of whether a person has applied, or intends to apply, for a working with children check in South Australia.

Where a person submits an application for a working with children check, and a prescribed offence or interstate or territory prohibition is identified in relation to the person, the central assessment unit cannot continue to conduct a working with children check in relation to the application.

Additionally, where the central assessment unit is conducting a working with children check and the person to whom the application relates becomes a prohibited person (through the identification of a prescribed offence or interstate or territory prohibition), the central assessment unit cannot continue to conduct a working with children check in relation to the application.

The central assessment unit will notify the person in writing that the person is subject to a statutory prohibition from working with children pursuant to section 15(1)(b) or section 15(1)(c) of the Act.

Persons prohibited from working with children as a result a prescribed offence have no avenue to review the prohibition.

For persons prohibited from working with children in South Australia because of an interstate or territory prohibition (however described) there is no right of review in South Australia. The person may seek a review of the original decision in the jurisdiction in which the decision was made. If a decision is changed, the applicant may apply for a working with children check in South Australia.

Appendix 1 – Category 1: Categories of prescribed offencesSpent convictions

An offence of which a person is convicted where that conviction is spent pursuant to the Spent Convictions Act 2009 or a corresponding law within the meaning of that Act is excluded from the definition of prescribed offence.

The statutory prohibition no longer applies if the prescribed offence for which the person was convicted becomes spent.

A person with a spent conviction or offence may apply for a working with children check, noting that a spent conviction or offence may form assessable information or otherwise be taken into account for the purposes of a working with children check.

4. Conducting a working with children check

To conduct a working with children check the central assessment unit will, as far as is reasonably practicable, actively seek to obtain assessable information in respect of a person.

Working with Children Check Guidelines – July 2019

Where a presumptive disqualification offence, as defined in section 26A of the Act, is identified, the central assessment unit will assess:

- information provided by the person regarding the circumstances of the presumptive disqualification offence to determine whether the offence may be disregarded in determining whether the person poses an unacceptable risk to children; and/ or
- whether information provided by the person demonstrates the existence of exceptional circumstances that may be capable of satisfying the central assessment unit that the person does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children.

If either of the above are satisfied, the central assessment unit will proceed to identify and assess any other assessable information against the prescribed risk assessment criteria to determine whether or not the person poses an unacceptable risk to children.

The central assessment unit will conduct a risk assessment where any other assessable information is identified in relation to the applicant.

On completing a working with children check in respect of a person, the central assessment unit will determine whether the person is, or is not, to be prohibited from working with children.

5. Assessable information

Consents

Information that has been classified as criminal intelligence, information provided to the central assessment unit by an employer subject to requirements of section 19 of the Act, or information provided to the central assessment unit by certain persons pursuant to section 40 of the Act may be other information.

In making a determination that other information is assessable information, the Registrar must be satisfied that the information has a bearing on the central assessment unit's assessment of whether or not a person is, or is not, to be prohibited from working with children.

Regulation 3 provides protected information is information that may, if disclosed,

- prejudice a criminal investigation or an investigation or assessment being conducted, or likely to be conducted, under the Children's Protection Act 1993 or the Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017, or
- identify, or enable the identification of, a child who has been abused or neglected or is at risk of harm; identify a parent, guardian or family member of a child has been abused or neglected or is at risk of harm; or identify a person who has made a report or notification that a child may be being abused or neglected, or may be at risk of harm; or
- endanger a person's life or physical safety or wellbeing.

Classifying specified information as protected information

Regulation 4 provides that the Registrar may, in accordance with any requirements set out in the Guidelines, classify specified information as protected information.

In making a determination to classify specified information a protected information, the Registrar must be satisfied that the information will prejudice an investigation or identify or endanger certain persons as described above.

Obtaining and using assessable information

The central assessment unit should, as far as is reasonably practicable, actively seek to obtain assessable information in relation to the person in respect of whom the working with children check is to be conducted.

However, the central assessment unit not required to assess all assessable information relating to a person.

The fact that the central assessment unit may not assess all assessable information in relation to a person in the course of a working with children check will not, of itself, invalidate the working with children check, or a decision of the central assessment unit made in relation to the working with children check.

In conducting a working with children check, the central assessment unit is not bound by the rules of evidence. It may adopt, as in its discretion it considers appropriate, any findings, decision or judgment of a court or other tribunal; and may otherwise inform itself as it thinks fit.

6. Persons automatically not prohibited from working with children

Except where the person is a prohibited person, the central assessment unit must, in a case where there is no assessable information relating to a person in respect of whom a working with children check is conducted, determine that the person is not to be prohibited from working with children.

The central assessment unit will write to the person advising that the person is not prohibited from working with children.

7. Persons presumed to pose an unacceptable risk to children – presumptive disqualification offences

A person who has been found guilty of a presumptive disqualification offence will be presumed to pose an unacceptable risk to children.

Where it is identified that a person has been found guilty of a presumptive disqualification offence as defined by section 26A of the Act the central assessment unit must determine that the person is to be prohibited from working with children, unless the person satisfies the central assessment unit that:

- the circumstances of the presumptive disqualification offence are such that the offence should be disregarded in determining whether the person poses an unacceptable risk to children; or
- such exceptional circumstances exist in relation to the person that the person does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children.
(collectively referred to as exceptional or other circumstances)

Appendix 2 – Category 2: Categories of presumptive disqualification offences

Invitation to demonstrate exceptional or other circumstances

Where the central assessment unit identifies that a person has been found guilty of a presumptive disqualification offence, the central assessment unit will write to the person outlining the relevant information before the central assessment unit decision maker and invite them to make submissions in relation to these matters and provide any further information.

The central assessment unit will not ask the person about, nor will they be required to respond to, any other assessable information that may exist in relation to the applicant at this stage.

The burden is on the person the subject of the application to demonstrate that the circumstances of the relevant offence should be disregarded in determining whether the person is an unacceptable risk to children or that such exceptional circumstances exist in relation to the person that the person does not pose an unacceptable risk to children.

A person who has not previously had a working with children check, or has not had a check within the preceding five years, will be given thirty calendar days to make a written submission and/ or provide further information in relation to the application, from the date of the central assessment unit's letter inviting a response.

A person who has had a working with children conducted within the preceding five years, where the central assessment unit determined they are not prohibited from working with children, will be given seven calendar days to make a written submission and/ or provide further information in relation to the application, from the date of the central assessment unit's letter inviting a response.

If the person does not respond to the invitation within the time provided, the central assessment unit must determine the person poses an unacceptable risk to children and is prohibited from working with them.

The central assessment unit will issue the person a prohibition notice prohibiting the person from working with children.

The central assessment unit is not required to consider or assess any further information in relation to an application for a working with children check made by the person.

Assessing exceptional or other circumstances

Where person responds to an invitation from the central assessment unit to make a written submission and/ or provide further information in relation to the application, the central assessment unit will consider the submissions and/ or information to assess whether:

- the circumstances of the presumptive disqualification offence are such that the offence may be disregarded in determining whether the person poses an unacceptable risk to children; or
- such exceptional circumstances exist in relation to the person that the person does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children.

The burden is on the person the subject of the application to make out that exceptional or other circumstances described above.

Working with Children Check Guidelines – July 2019

When assessing whether the person has rebutted the presumption, the Central assessment unit will only consider the applicant's submissions in regard to the above matters and the information already before it in relation to those matters.

Guidance for determining whether circumstances exist to disregard offence

A person with a presumptive disqualification offence may rebut the presumption that they pose an unacceptable risk to children if they provide information and evidence to demonstrate that the circumstances of the relevant offence or charge are such that that offending or alleged offending do not indicate that the person will pose a risk to children. This will require assessment of the relevant circumstances on a case-by-case basis.

Factors to be considered as to whether the circumstances of the presumptive disqualification offence committed, or alleged to have been committed, by the person are such that the offence should be disregarded in determining whether the applicant poses an unacceptable risk to children may include but are not limited to:

- the offending was in response to an abusive domestic violence relationship;
- the person was acting in self-defence to, or defending another, against an unprovoked assault; or
- the person committed the offending under the direction/duress of a person in authority (e.g. a family member).

Guidance for determining exceptional circumstances

Alternatively, a person with a presumptive disqualification offence may rebut the above presumption if they provide information and evidence that satisfies the central assessment unit of exceptional circumstances in relation to him or her that demonstrates that he or she does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children, despite the relevant offending or charge.

In order to be exceptional, such circumstances must, at the very least, be unusual or in the nature of exception and of such significance that it justifies displacing of the statutory presumption that the person poses an unacceptable risk to children. Such exceptional circumstances are not limited to the circumstances of the offence or charge leading to a presumed prohibition.

Exceptional circumstances that may exist in relation to the person such that the person does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children may include, but are not limited to:

- the applicant has voluntarily completed a supervised intervention program (treatment, rehabilitation, behaviour management).

Working with Children Check Guidelines – July 2019

Independent evidence must exist which verifies the exceptional or other circumstances, either provided by the applicant or identified by the central assessment unit. The word of the person the subject of the application is not sufficient.

The age of the offence or that a person has not offended since the presumptive disqualification offence are, in and of themselves, factors not capable of satisfying the central assessment unit that the person should not be presumed to pose a risk to children and/or that the relevant offending should be disregarded for the purposes of assessing risk to children.

In assessing the person's circumstances, the paramount consideration of the central assessment unit must be the best interests of children, having regard to their safety and protection.

Outcome of assessment of exceptional or other circumstances

If a person with a presumptive disqualifying offence does not satisfy the central assessment unit that:

- the circumstances of the presumptive disqualification offence are such that the offence should be disregarded in determining whether the person poses an unacceptable risk to children; or
- such exceptional circumstances exist in relation to the person that the person does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children, the central assessment unit must determine the person poses an unacceptable risk to children and should be prohibited from working with them. The central assessment unit is not required to consider or assess any further information in relation to an application for a working with children check made by that person.

The central assessment unit will issue the applicant a prohibition notice prohibiting the person from working with children.

If a person with a presumptive disqualification offence provides information capable of demonstrating either that:

- the circumstances of the presumptive disqualification offence are such that the offence should be disregarded in determining whether the person poses an unacceptable risk to children; or
- such exceptional circumstances exist in relation to the person that the person does not appear, or no longer appears, to pose an unacceptable risk to children, the central assessment unit may assess other assessable information in relation to that person.

8. Risk assessment process – all other assessable information

What is a risk assessment?

A risk assessment is an evaluation of whether a person poses an unacceptable risk to children in light of any assessable information (including criminal history, any child protection information or any disciplinary or misconduct information) identified in relation to the person, conducted by the central assessment unit.

The central assessment unit will not make any presumption of outcome as a starting point.

The intent of the risk assessment process is not to decide whether a person is guilty or innocent or to reinvestigate a matter; but rather to determine whether a person poses an unacceptable risk to children. The most important consideration in making a working with children check determination is the best interests of children, having regard to their safety and protection.

Risk context

The risk to be assessed is the risk to children posed by persons who work with them.

It is not the role of the central assessment unit to determine whether an applicant did or did not do something based on the information before them, a working with children check is not an investigatory process; it is a consideration whether the behaviour indicates the applicant presents a risk to children.

In considering whether an applicant poses an unacceptable risk to children, the central assessment unit will consider the nature and degree of any risk identified and possible harm that may flow if the perceived risk eventuated.

In determining if there is an unacceptable risk to children, the central assessment unit does not need to be satisfied that it is likely the person will cause harm to a child in the future. Risk must be unacceptable; it does not need to be likely.

When a risk assessment is undertaken

The central assessment unit will conduct a risk assessment where assessable information is identified in relation to the applicant.

As described above, this is subject to the central assessment unit identifying:

- that the person is already prohibited from working with children pursuant to sections 15(1)(b) or (c) of the Act; or

Working with Children Check Guidelines – July 2019

- that the person has been found guilty of a presumptive disqualification offence for the purposes of the Act and has not rebutted the statutory presumption that they pose an unacceptable risk to children.

The central assessment unit will not conduct a risk assessment in these circumstances.

Where a person who has been found guilty of a presumptive disqualification offence for the purposes of the Act satisfies the central assessment unit that exceptional or other circumstances exist in relation to them or their relevant offence, such that the relevant offence may be disregarded and/or the person does not, or no longer, appears to pose a risk to children, the central assessment unit will proceed to conduct a risk assessment in relation to the person, taking into account other assessable information.

A person who has had a working with children check where the central assessment unit determined they were not to be prohibited from working with children is subject to ongoing monitoring for new assessable information. This may lead to a statutory prohibition, the identification of a presumptive disqualification offence or other assessable information that may result in a re-assessment and possible prohibition of a person wanting to work with children.

Initial assessment

To identify risk the central assessment unit will consider all assessable information in relation to the applicant, which includes criminal history information, disciplinary and misconduct information, child protection information or other information.

The existence of potential sources of risk is identified through the initial assessment process, where the central assessment unit will, as far as is reasonably practicable, actively seek to obtain assessable information in relation to the person in respect of whom the working with children check is to be conducted.

Where there is no assessable information in relation to a person in respect of whom a working with children check is conducted, the central assessment unit must determine that the person is not to be prohibited from working with children.

For assessment purposes, assessable information has been categorised according to seriousness and relevance in the context of prohibiting persons who pose an unacceptable risk to children from working with them and may be managed in accordance with the processes below:

- Information that requires a detailed risk assessment (Category 3 information)
- Low risk assessable information (Category 4 information)

Appendix 3 – Category 3: Information that requires a detailed risk assessment

Appendix 4 – Category 4: Low risk assessable information

Treatment of low risk assessable information

As part of a risk assessment, a central assessment unit decision maker must review the assessable information before them, assess it, and determine if collectively it demonstrates, on the balance of probabilities, that the person poses an unacceptable risk to children.

Low risk assessable information represents information of a type that predominantly involves offending or behaviour that is less serious or has less relevance to children and accordingly less weight may be attached to it as part of the assessment process.

In accordance with the Standards outlined at Part 9 of these Guidelines, category 4 information is information that has been weighted to assist the central assessment unit decision maker conduct a risk assessment.

Where only low risk assessable information is identified in relation to a person in respect of whom a working with children check is conducted, the central assessment unit may determine that the person is not to be prohibited from working with children, without further assessing the information against the risk assessment criteria set out at Part 10 of these Guidelines.

The identification of low risk assessable information alone, is unlikely to require closer or further analysis that is undertaken in a detailed risk assessment. An applicant who has only low risk assessable information may be not prohibited from working with children.

However, where category 3 information that requires a detailed assessment has been identified in relation to an applicant category 4 low risk assessable information may be used or form part of a risk assessment.

Information that requires a detailed risk assessment

A detailed risk assessment must be undertaken where category 3 assessable information is identified in relation to the person, or where a presumptive disqualification offence has been identified and the person has satisfied the central assessment unit exceptional or other circumstances exist.

Where the person has rebutted the statutory presumption that they pose an unacceptable risk to children, a detailed risk assessment must follow.

A detailed risk assessment is conducted by the central assessment unit assessing assessable information in relation to a person against the prescribed risk assessment criteria to determine whether or not the person poses an unacceptable risk to children.

Where category 3 assessable information has been identified in relation to the person the subject of the working with children check low risk assessable information may be used or form part of a risk assessment, bearing in mind its weighting.

Conducting a risk assessment

It is not possible to outline every potential consideration or outcome. The tables below identify the minimum considerations in the event assessable information examined during the risk assessment requires further scrutiny.

Any conclusions reached, about a person's risk to children, will be based on information and evidence obtained by the central assessment unit decision maker.

Factors not to be considered as part of a risk assessment

When conducting a risk assessment the following factors should not be taken into consideration:

- the impact of a prohibited outcome on the person – the rights of, or personal impact on the person the subject of the application, should they be prohibited from working with children following a risk assessment are not relevant considerations in assessing whether they pose an unacceptable risk to children;
- the role of the person the subject of the application – a working with children check outcome is portable between roles and employers. Any stated role of the person at the time of application or throughout the assessment process bears no weight as to whether the applicant poses an unacceptable risk to children; and/ or
- lived experience – it is acknowledged that some individuals, by virtue of their history, have valuable lived experience to share with children, and that a person can make significant changes in their life, this alone is not relevant for the risk assessment. The role of the central assessment unit is to determine whether, based on assessable information, a person poses an unacceptable risk to children. It is not to assess suitability for employment; this is an employer's responsibility.

9. Standards pursuant to section 4(2)(b) of the Act

Weighting information sources

As part of a risk assessment, a central assessment unit decision maker must review the assessable information before them, assess it, and determine if it meets the standard of proof required, and demonstrates that an applicant poses an unacceptable risk to children.

The standard of proof required when conducting a risk assessment as part of a working with children check is the civil standard, i.e.: does the person pose an unacceptable risk to children on the balance of probabilities.

Working with Children Check Guidelines – July 2019

In other words, if, following an analysis of the information, the central assessment unit decision maker determines that it is more probable than not, that an applicant poses an unacceptable risk to children, the central assessment unit will determine an applicant is to be prohibited from working with them.

The weight given to information for the purposes of making this assessment relates to the quality, relevance and seriousness of the information. In the context of a risk assessment, it is the emphasis or degree of reliance a decision maker may place on the information before them.

Information that is of low quality (i.e. incomplete, vague, circumstantial or uncorroborated) will be given less weight than evidence that is direct, unrefuted or supported by other information from a reliable source. For example, information provided by an independent witness or notifier in regard to abuse sustained by a child is of greater weight than information offered by a person whose evidence may be compromised in some way.

To determine the weight to be given to assessable information in a risk assessment, the Central assessment unit will evaluate the evidence in accordance with the guidelines provided in Table 1 – Weighting Information Sources. These factors should be used as a guide only; they are not intended to be an assessment checklist.

Possible information (evidence) before the decision maker might include:

- Regulatory or agency reports – e.g. Department for Child Protection investigation or outcome rationale reports;
- Professional reports/assessment – e.g. reports from medical professionals, psychologists, police reports;
- Applicant submissions – submitted as part of the application process or during risk assessment process;
- Statutory declarations; or
- Court documents (Sentencing remarks, Court Orders)/ police documents.

Inconsistent with objective facts of a matter (where known)

10. Risk assessment criteria pursuant to section 4(2)(d) of the Act

While the weight given to information relates to the quality of the evidence, or the degree of reliance the central assessment unit decision maker may place on the information before them, the risk assessment criteria is concerned with the content of the information or evidence. The central assessment unit decision maker must consider the substance of the information and have regard to:

- the nature, gravity and circumstances of the information including criminal offences, child protection information or disciplinary or misconduct information and how this is relevant to children or child related work;
- the length of time that has passed since the event occurred;
- the vulnerability of the victim at the time of the event including the age of the victim, the age of the person at the time of the event, the age difference between the person and the victim and the person's relationship to the victim or position of authority over the victim at the time of the event;
- the person's criminal, child protection, disciplinary or misconduct and/or other relevant history, including whether there is a pattern of concerning conduct;
- the person's conduct since the event;
- all other relevant circumstances in respect of the information including offending, child protection, disciplinary or misconduct and/or other information or other relevant history, and the impact on their eligibility to be engaged in child related work.

In weighing up the risk assessment criteria, the paramount consideration must be the best interests of children, having regard to their safety and protection.

Analysing risk

To determine whether the information indicates the person the subject of the application is presents a risk to children, the central assessment unit decision maker may consider the information in accordance with the guidance provided in the Table 2.

The risk assessment criteria should inform a thorough and balanced assessment of risk. The factors should be considered in their totality. They have not been recorded in any particular order and recording does not indicate priority or weight to be applied to an application. Nor is the table intended for use as a checklist. The particulars of the information may suggest additional matters relevant to the assessment of risk or that some of the contextual factors are not relevant.

11. Administrative decision making

A central assessment unit determination as to whether a person is, or is not, to be prohibited from working with children is an administrative decision that requires the exercise of discretion. In other words, the decision maker has a choice about what decision to make and why.

How should decision makers exercise discretionary powers?

Central assessment unit decision makers may only exercise their discretionary powers in accordance with the legislative provisions conferring the power and in accordance with the objects and principles of the Act.

Central assessment unit decision makers will act reasonably and impartially and will not make decisions based on their personal values.

In exercising discretionary powers, central assessment unit decision-makers will have regard to specific requirements of the Act, Regulations and Guidelines as well as any other policies of the central assessment unit. They will satisfy general administrative law requirements to:

- act in good faith and for a proper purpose;
- comply with legislative procedures;
- consider only relevant considerations and ignore irrelevant ones;
- act reasonably and on reasonable grounds;
- make decisions based on supporting evidence;
- give adequate weight to matters of great importance but not give excessive weight to matters of no great importance;
- give proper consideration to the merits of the case;
- provide the person affected by the decision with procedural fairness; and
- exercise their discretion independently and not under the dictation of a third person or body.

A failure to act within the power provided or to comply with general administrative law principles may result in the South Australian Civil and Administrative Appeals Tribunal overturning a decision, or taking other action in respect of the decision.

Principles of procedural fairness

Procedural fairness requires government decision makers act fairly when making an administrative decision. It is concerned with the procedures used by a decision maker, rather than the final outcome reached. It expects that fair and proper procedure be used when making a decision.

Procedural fairness has two components – the hearing rule and the bias rule. The bias rule demands that a decision maker will not handle matters in which they have an actual or reasonably perceived conflict of interest or bias. The hearing rule requires that someone who will be affected by a prospective administrative decision must be heard, whether through oral or written submissions, before the decision is made.

The central assessment unit and the Registrar (as the case requires) are required to provide persons procedural fairness in exercising powers or performing functions under the Act as set out in regulation 10(1) of the Regulations.

Invitation to respond to information

The central assessment unit will provide persons who may be affected by a decision the opportunity to respond to assessable information before a determination is made to prohibit the person from working with children.

The central assessment unit will write to the applicant and invite them to make a written submission and/ or provide further information, about why they should not be prohibited from working with children.

Such assessable information is information a central assessment unit decision maker may rely, or place greater weight on, and is likely to result in a decision to prohibit the applicant from working with children.

The central assessment unit will ensure the applicant:

- is made aware of the assessable information relation to them, before preparing their reply; and
- has a reasonable chance to consider their position and the opportunity to reply in a way that is appropriate for them in their circumstances.

A central assessment unit decision maker will contact the applicant where they intend to make a determination to prohibit a person from working with children. Where, on the information before them, the central assessment unit decision maker intends to make a determination to not prohibit the applicant, the central assessment unit decision maker is not required to write to the applicant and invite them to make a submission.

Excluding protected information or information classified as criminal intelligence, assessable information the central assessment unit has in regard to the person the subject of the application that may result in an determination to prohibit should be disclosed to the applicant. A summary of the information is sufficient; original documents and the identity of confidential sources do not have to be provided.

The person the subject of the application will be given thirty calendar days to make a written submission and/ or provide further information in relation to the application, from the date of the central assessment unit's letter inviting a response.

If the person does not respond to the invitation within the time provided, the central assessment unit decision maker will continue to conduct the risk assessment and make a determination based on the information before them. The failure or refusal of a person to make submission or provide further information will not be taken into account for the purposes of assessing whether or not the person poses an unacceptable risk to children.

When assessing information before them the central assessment unit decision maker will have regard to any submissions made by the applicant, and give proper and genuine consideration to that person's case.

Circumstances where procedural fairness requirements are displaced

Except insofar as there is a statutory requirement to provide reasons for a decision to prohibit a person from working with children, the central assessment unit decision maker is not, when conducting a working with children check, required to afford a person procedural fairness where:

- the Registrar, based on the assessable information available to them, is of the opinion that the person to whom the working with children check relates poses an immediate and serious risk to the safety of a child or children
- the assessable information consists of or includes information relating to a prescribed offence with which the person to whom the working with children check relates has been charged, but that has not yet been determined
- the person is a prohibited person

12. Outcome of a risk assessment

On completing a working with children check, the central assessment unit must determine whether the person is, or is not, to be prohibited from working with children.

There are two outcomes of a working with children check.

Not prohibited

The central assessment unit determines the person does not pose an unacceptable risk to children and is not prohibited from working with children.

The central assessment unit will write to the person advising that the person is not prohibited from working with children.

Prohibited

The central assessment unit determines, in accordance with the Act, the regulations and these Guidelines, that the person poses an unacceptable risk to children and the central assessment unit determines that the person is to be prohibited from working with children.

The central assessment unit will issue a prohibition notice to the person prohibiting the person from engaging in child-related work.

Prohibition notice

A prohibition notice will be issued as soon as is reasonably practicable after the Central assessment unit makes the determination the person who is the subject of the application poses an unacceptable risk to children and is prohibited from working with children. It will remain in force until it is revoked in accordance with the Act.

Unless the central assessment unit is not required to give detailed reasons due to reliance on criminal intelligence or protected information (as explained further below), the prohibition notice will set out the reasons why the Central assessment unit determined that the person to whom the prohibition notice relates is to be prohibited from engaging in child-related work. It will also provide information on how the person to whom the prohibition notice relates can seek a review of the decision to issue the notice by the South Australian Civil and Administrative Tribunal.

Reasons for decisions

Giving reasons for a decision should enable the people affected by the decision to understand why a particular decision was made. Generally speaking, where the central assessment unit determines that a person is to be prohibited from working with children, it will provide that person with the reasons for that decision.

However, in cases where the central assessment unit determines to prohibit a person from working with children on the basis of information that is classified by the Commissioner of Police as criminal intelligence or information that is classified by the Registrar as protected information, the central assessment unit may simply provide reasons for the decision that it would be contrary to the public interest to allow the person to work with children.

Review

Persons prohibited from working with children as a result a prescribed disqualification offence and issued a prohibition notice may apply to the central assessment unit to have the prohibition notice revoked.

A person who has been issued a prohibition notice prohibiting them from working with children may apply to the central assessment unit to have the prohibition notice revoked.

They may also apply directly to the South Australian Civil and Administrative Tribunal (SACAT) to review the decision of the central assessment unit to issue the prohibition notice within 14 days after the applicant receives notice of the decision.

SACAT may allow an extension of time if it is satisfied that special circumstances exist and another party will not be unreasonably disadvantaged because of the delay in commencing proceedings.

13. Conducting additional working with children checks: monitoring

A person who is not prohibited from working with children is subject to ongoing monitoring of assessable information, which may lead to re-assessment, and possible prohibition of a person.

In addition to conducting a working with children check on application of a person, the central assessment unit may, at any time, conduct a working with children check in relation to a particular person.

An additional working with children check may be conducted on the application of an employer of the person; or on the central assessment unit's own motion and must be conducted if the Minister so directs.

All working with children checks will be conducted in accordance with these Guidelines.

14. Benchmarks pursuant to section 4(2)(c) of the Act

The central assessment unit aims to conduct working with children checks in a timely manner and in accordance with obligations imposed under the Act, Regulations and these Guidelines. The central assessment unit is committed to continuously improve the efficiency with which it processes applications, while ensuring risk assessments and decision making standards for determine whether or not the person poses an unacceptable risk to children are maintained.

To ensure risks to children are minimised, once all necessary information is obtained from external parties, the central assessment unit will aim to:

- process the majority of applications for which no risk assessment is required within 5 working days; and
- process the majority of working with children checks, for which a risk assessment is required, within 21 working days.

NATURAL RESOURCES MANAGEMENT ACT 2004

Notice of Authorisation to Take Water

PURSUANT to section 128 of the Natural Resources Management Act 2004, I, David Speirs, Minister for Environment and Water, hereby authorise the taking of roof runoff (surface water) from all Surface Water Prescribed Areas within the State of South Australia for the purposes of commercial use (including irrigation) and industrial, environmental or recreational use, subject to the conditions specified in Schedule A.

SCHEDULE A

1. Surface water taken pursuant to this authorisation may only be used for one or more of the purposes described above and no other purpose, unless otherwise authorised.
2. Surface water taken pursuant to this authorisation can only be collected where the volume of water deemed to be collected from the connected roof area is equal to or less than 1500 kilolitres per annum.
3. The volume deemed to be collected from the connected roof area is determined as follows:

$$\text{Potential Estimated Average Annual Capture Amount (kilolitres)} = \frac{\text{roof area (in square metres)} \times \text{average annual rainfall for the relevant location (in millimetres)}}{1\,000}$$ on the basis that 1 mm of rain per square metre of roof yields 1 litre of water and using the relevant map of those appended as Attachments 1-7 to determine the average annual rainfall.

4. All water taken pursuant to this authorisation must be directed to closed water storage facilities (holding tanks).
5. Any water collected pursuant to this authorisation that overflows from a holding tank(s) must be released into the environment through the existing surface water drainage arrangements and must not be recaptured or redirected, unless otherwise authorised.
6. This authorisation will not apply where the Minister determines that the collection of rainwater from a particular roof by a person in a particular Surface Water Prescribed Area has or will have a detrimental effect on the ability of the holders of water licences in the same Surface Water Prescribed Area to exercise their rights in respect of the allocations endorsed on their licences and the Minister notifies the person in writing of that determination.

This authorisation commences on the date below and will remain in effect unless subsequently varied or revoked.

2. A maximum volume of 3,200 megalitres of surface water each water use year may be taken from the Gawler River Prescribed Watercourse during the period referred to in Condition 1 above.
3. Water must not be taken from the Gawler River Prescribed Watercourse when the rate of flow in the River at an approved point where water will be taken is less than 616 litres per second (threshold flow rate). The authorised water user must record flow rate immediately prior to and after each extraction of water from the Gawler River Prescribed Watercourse.
4. - (2) For the purposes of section 139 of the Act, work of the following nature is prescribed as building work which is to be treated for the purposes of that section as building work that affects the stability of other land or premises, namely:
 - (a) an excavation which intersects a notional plane extending downwards at a slope of 1 vertical to 2 horizontal from a point 600 mm below natural ground level at a boundary with an adjoining site (as depicted by the example shown as figure 1 in Schedule 10);
 - (b) an excavation which intersects any notional plane extending downwards at a slope of 1 vertical to 2 horizontal from a point at natural ground level at any boundary between 2 sites (not being a boundary with the site of the excavation), where the boundary is within a distance equal to twice the depth of the excavation (as depicted by the example shown as figure 2 in Schedule 10);

 - (a) the relevant authority may approve the variation; and
 - (b) the request is not to be treated as a new application for development authorisation; and
 - (c) unless the variation is such that the result is an inconsistency with another consent, no further step need be taken in relation to a development approval already given (and no new approval needs to be given) but the relevant authority—
 - (i) must endorse the notice that was given for the original development authorisation, including by noting the date of the minor variation and the nature of the variation; and
 - (ii) must—
